NEW PLANS FOR SPORTSMEN

A milestone in the history of the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries will be reached this month when its Cumberland Game Farm releases for distribution the last bobwhite quail and wild turkeys left at the farm and devotes its facilities exclusively to the propagation of experimental exotic species.

In so doing, the commission will be turning from a 40-year-old program of raising and releasing native birds to a new game farm approach based on the proposition that, whereas our native species are now abundant enough to spread out into most of the suitable habitat available, foreign game birds from areas with a climate similar to Virginia's may find themselves at home in parts of the state now unsuitable for bobwhite, turkey, or grouse.

Just as Virginia was the first state to raise bobwhite quail for restocking (at Windsor Shades in 1920), it is now assuming a leading role in the new cooperative foreign game introduction program. Under this program, the commission has agreed to propagate and release in suitable areas foreign game species located, trapped, and shipped here by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The first releases under this program took place in September, 1958 when 600 pheasants — crosses between Iranian blackneck and Imperial Valley ringnecks — were liberated in Charles City, Surry and Halifax Counties. Since then, hundreds more have been raised and given their freedom in these and several other Tidewater and Piedmont Counties.

The results of these releases have, to date, been most encouraging. As recently as March 29, biologist Herman J. Tuttle, in charge of the field end of the program, observed 83 pheasants in Charles City County during a six-hour census, and noted that the cock birds were crowing and forming harems.

On March 18, the commission received via air express from India 29 young and 48 adult black francolins, attractive game birds about twice the size of bobwhites and native to northern India. Because they are difficult to raise in captivity, the adult birds were released immediately on Hog Island in Surry County, while the young birds were taken by game farm supervisor Dennis Hart to Cumberland for propagation.

This month, a total of 450 western Iranian black-neck - ringneck pheasants will be released in Charles City and Prince George Counties and on Camp Pickett and Buckingham - Appomattox State Forest; 325 eastern Iranian blackneck - ringneck cross pheasants will go to Halifax and Campbell Counties, and 370 so-called "talischensis back" cross Iranian pheasants will be freed in Richmond County.

In addition, approximately 600 bobwhite will go to counties in western Virginia hardest hit by this winter's snowstorms, and some 800 turkeys will be distributed statewide.

Womans Club Art Exhibit

The Fine Arts Department of The Woman's Club of Appomattox, under the direction of Mrs. Richard G. Janatka, is sponsoring an Art Exhibit now being shown in the Lobby of The Bank of Appomattox.

The paintings are done by Mrs. Kirk Perrow, Jr., of Hurt, Va., better known in the art circle as "Epps Perrow." The collection consists of water colors, brush and pallet knife work done in oils. One group of water colors are paintings of several of the buildings restored at The Old Appomattox Court House. There are also abstracts, portraits, flowers and still life done in oils.

Mrs. Perrow is a well - known artist in Virginia, having exhibited her paintings throughout the state. She studied with Miss Georgia Morgan at Lynchburg College, with a scholarship from there to Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Art. She had summer school work under H. H. Breckenridge, of Gloucester, Mass. She is a member of the Art Center in Lynchburg, studying under Hal McClintosh and Bab Harmon; acting as chairman of the Art Center Shows in Lynchburg. She is also chairman of the Fine Arts Committee in the Alice Kyle District of the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs.

The exhibit will be on display in the bank lobby until the end of April and the public is invited to view the paintings.

HONOR STUDENT

. . . William Luther Reynolds

William Luther Reynolds was one of the students honored at a "Honor Convocation" which was held at Reynolds Hall on April 12, 1960, at 4:10 P. M., and a reception immediately afterwards in Elizabeth Moore Hall on the campus of West Virginia University.

This convocation was held for all students who have received scholarships, awards or any other honors for scholastic achievements, and for students who have shown outstanding qualities as students and citizens of the college on the campus of West Virginia University.

Luther is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Reynolds, of Spout Spring, Va. He is a sophomore at the University and plans to move to Rome, W. Va., for the summer months, where he will work as an Assistant Forester.

Responsibilities of A Teacher

(Editors' Note: This Article is One of A Series Pertaining to The Education Progress of Our County School System.)

MY DUTIES OR RESPONSIBILITY AS A SCHOOL TEACHER

By: Celia C. Boomer

Education is not merely reciting what pupils get out of books. Education is the organization of knowledge into human excellence. The object of teaching a child is to enable him to get along without his teacher.

The essential element of a teacher's drawing power is his attitude toward his work. If he looks at each day as "just another day," he lacks the enthusiasm that is necessary to inspire others. If he permits himself to talk down his job and look upon it as drudgery, he loses the personal magnetism that is essential for successful leadership.

A teacher should be eager and alert as a person, and as a teacher. He should be warm and kindly, interested in others. He should be proud of being a teacher. He should have a sense of humor.

One should teach more by example than by precept. Education should be a character-building process as well as the teaching of subject matter.

My duty as a teacher is to find out something about the abilities, interests, and needs of students and use the knowledge gained for their benefit.

I like to know the children whom I teach as individuals, and I want to know their families as friends.

One must like people to be a successful teacher. This will win the confidence of pupils, and if combined with respect will give the authority needed to be effective in the classroom.

It is important to be informed and competent in regard to the subject matter one is teaching, able in the art of communication, and to be an intellectually and a morally mature person.

As a teacher I should refuse to let the required amount of "rote" work rob me of initiative and enthusiam. I should keep the impression on the highest possible plane. Instead of thinking in tearms of groups, I should think in terms of the need of each pupil, trying to impress upon pupils the relation of their present work to that of colleges and universities, and to whatever lifework they may choose.

It is important to keep in mind the distinction between knowing and understanding. A pupil knows what the teacher has explained if he has been attentive and is able to repeate form memory what he has heard. But understanding is more than this and should be the constant goal of the teacher.

HONORED AT COLLEGE

. . . . Frank Thomas Hanenkrat

Richmond, Va.- An Appomattox student, Frank Thomas Hanenkrat, has been awarded intermediate honors at the University of Richmond for outstanding scholastic achievement during his first two years of college. Hanenkrat is a junior in Richmond College, the men's undergraduate unit of the University. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Frank Hanenkrat, of Appomattox.

At Annual Conference

School Division Superintendent J. A. Burke has been in Roanoke the first three days of this week attending the annual conference of Division Superintendents.

Good citizenship in school and out demands the ability and the willingness to get along with other people. A student may acquire an understanding of the meaning and purposes of education and of their own relation thereto, and may become skilled in applying their mental processes to the mastery of school tasks; but they will still need training in their relationships with their fellows. Much of this they will naturally obtain in their daily activity, in rubbing shoulders with fellow students, and in the give-and-take of students life.

Good manners come from within and have as their foundation good behavior and right conduct. If one is naturally kind, thoughtful, and generous, good manners will come easily. Emerson says, "The power of manners is incessant . . . no one can resist their influence . . . . . There are certain manners which are learned in good society of such a one that, if a person has them, he or she . . . is everywhere welcome, though without beauty or wealth or genius."

Manners, conduct, and personality are not merely "skin-deep," but rather they come from within and have as their basis the firm foundation of sincere character. Courage, sincerity, loyalty, honesty, faith, love, and a self-sacrificing, cooperative spirit are traits of character desirable and essential in any good personality.

One should inculcate in students a willingness and eagerness to welcome truth, beauty, and goodness. An old quotation runs something like this: "Talent is something but tact is everything." If you have tact, the ability to say or do the right thing at the right time, you are fortunate. We can urge students to make tactfulness an ever - present concern.

To live daily in the company of the young, who are full of enthusiasm and hope, who know nothing as yet of the serious responsibilities of later years,who are active and happy, who have faith in you and affection for you, who make you their model in character and attainments, — this will keep you young and fill your days with fresh enthusiasm.

John Ruskin's idea of education expresses my thoughts and feelings: "The entire object of education is to make people not merely do the right things but enjoy the right things, not merely industrious but to love industry, not merely learned but to love knowledge, not merely pure but to love purity, not merely just but to hunger and thirst after justice."

Easter Season Plans Here Are Scheduled

A quiet Easter season with traditional observances is being planned for Appomattox. Most churches are listing special services, including, in some cases, Sunrise events.

Public schools will be open Friday but will not be open on Easter Monday. This normal holiday, is being used as a regular school day to help make up a day of the time lost during the severe winter weather. Other days lost will be made up at the end of the session.

A check by this newspaper found that virtually all business places will be open as usual during Easter week-end. Local stores interviewed stated that they would be open for business on Easter Monday. They also reported that business has been exceptionally good during the Easter shopping season, and they will be ready for seasonal values this week-end.

Local banks were closed Wednesday of this week, the occasion being the birthday of Thomas Jefferson.

SUNRISE SERVICE AT EVERGREEN

Sunrise Services will be held on the lawn of the Evergreen Baptist Church Sunday at 6:00 A. M. The churches participating are are: the Evergreen Methodist, Rocks Baptist, Central Baptist, Hollywood Baptist and Evergreen Baptist.

The Rev. R. P. Welch, of near Pamplin, will be the speaker. The public is invited.
